

Jim Lange

Jim Lange is a corporate advisor/management consultant specializing in the assessment, development, implementation, and monitoring of executive level initiatives, with special attention paid to corporate cultures. He is intimately involved in all aspects of his clients operation, though most of his attention is spent developing the executive and management team.

Prior to Jim's career as a corporate advisor he served in many managerial and executive capacities in both the manufacturing and sales sectors. He is the author of the book, The Commercial Construction Cookbook: From Suits to Nuts, and has authored various papers and workshops.

Jim brings a diverse combination of business strategy, brand strategy and culture change experience to his role as corporate advisor. This unique blend of experiences allows Jim and his team to see all sides of issues and opportunities, much to his client partners' advantage.
